Sri Dakshinamukha Nandi Tirtha Kalyani Kshetra, Malleswaram, Bangalore, India

Ref: Wikipedia

Sri Dakshinamukha Nandi Tirtha Kalyani Kshetra is a small temple located in front of the Gangamma temple and diagonally opposite to the Kadu Malleshwara temple on 2nd Temple Street, Malleswaram layout in the north-western area of Bangalore city, Karnataka, India.

The temple is also known as Nandi Tirtha, Nandishwara teertha, Basava teertha or simply as Malleswaram Nandi gudi. The main deity of the temple is Shiva, in the form of a Shiva Linga (lingam).

The temple was rediscovered in 1997 after being buried for 400 years.

Toponymy

The focal point of this temple is a unique stone Nandi which is positioned facing the Southern direction – (Dakshina in Kannada) - [1] as opposed to eastwards usually found in Indian temples. 'Dakhshinamuka Nandi' means 'South facing Nandi.

There is a continuous stream of water that flows out of the Nandi's mouth, which is considered to be holy water, referred to as 'Tirtha' in Kannada.

The water from the Nandi's mouth falls onto the Shivalinga and flows into a stepped tank in the middle of the temple, called a 'Kalyani' - Temple tank in Kannada.

'Kshetra' means a 'place' in Kannada and is often used to refer to a place or region of historical or religious importance.

The combination of all the above elements adds up to the official name of the temple.

Temple history

Another temple called Nandi-teertha, which was reported by some agencies to be 400 years old, was re-discovered in 1997 AD during excavation work in a place south-east of the Kadu Mallikarjuna temple. However, B N Sundara Rao in his book, Bengalurina Itihasa, has documented that the late Rao Bahadur Yele Mallappa Shetty constructed this Kalyani along with the Nandi, and the Shiva-linga. The Kalyani was constructed sometime after the construction of Sankey tank in about 1882 AD. Downward stream from the Sankey tank was observed to be flowing towards the place by Mallappa Shetty. He constructed a conduit pipe from here to the mouth of the Nandi so that water flows gently through the mouth of the Nandi throughout the year onto a Shiva-linga idol (Nandikeshwara) which was set right underneath. This water was then channelled to a Kalyani (stepped tank) which is at a lower level such that excess water flowed onto a well found in the garden in front of the southern entrance of the temple. This was connected to a storm water drain (raja-kaluve) which emptied the excess into another tank bund called Jakkarayana kere. This network has unfortunately been encroached upon. Surrounding the Kalyani is a double storeyed colonnaded structure. A shrine to Ganesha is also present in the vicinity. This, along with the Kadu Mallikarjuna and Gangamma temples, marks the linkage of the sacred to a natural node now.[2]

1997 rediscovery

At some point in its history, the Nandi Tirtha temple fell into disuse and was slowly buried under mud and dirt. As this temple is below the normal ground level of the surrounding area; and there is no Gopuram tower, the entire structure of this temple eventually disappeared from view.

However, knowledge of the existence of a Temple or Kalyani continued to survive in the memory of the people residing in this area.

As Malleswaram developed into one of the preferred residential areas of Bangalore, property prices increased significantly. In 1997, there was an attempt to usurp this temple area and sell it off as a vacant plot of land.[3]

After protests by the local residents, the land in question was dug up and the temple complex gradually emerged from under the mud and dirt.

Architecture and layout

The temple is essentially built as a pillared - covered corridor around a central stepped Temple tank or Kalyani.

The Nandi is considered to be Shiva's vahana and usually placed in front, facing the Shivalinga in most temples. However, the Nandi in this temple is placed on a platform built above the Shivalinga.

A continuous stream of water flows out of the Nandi's mouth and falls onto the Shivaling through an opening in the floor. The water then collects in the Kalyani and the over flow is evacuated into the open well outside the temple.

Source of the water

The source of the water flowing out of the Nandi's mouth is from the excess outflow from the Sankey Tank.[2]

Rituals and festivals

As a Shiva temple, all the traditional festivals and rituals associated with the main deity are organized and celebrated at this temple. Occasions like Maha Shivaratri see a huge crowd of devotees arriving for Darshan.

On regular days, the temple is open from 7:30 AM to 12 Noon and thereafter from 5:00 PM to 8:30 PM.

Other shrines in the structure

There is a small shrine dedicated to Ganesha, located in the corridor towards the left of the Shivaling.There is a Navagraha platform in the corridor towards the right side of the main deity.

Here is the comprehensive information about Sri Dakshinamukha Nandi Tirtha Kalyani Kshetra.

Location

The temple is situated in the older quarters of Bangalore, tucked away in the northwestern suburb of Malleshwaram.

- Address: 2nd Temple Street, Vyalikaval, Kodandarampura, Malleshwaram, Bengaluru, Karnataka 560003.
- Landmarks: It is situated directly in front of the Sri Gangamma Devi Temple and diagonally opposite the historical Kadu Malleshwara Swamy Temple.

How to Get There

- By Metro: The nearest metro station is Mantri Square Sampige Road (Green Line), located roughly 1.5 km away. Alternatively, the Srirampura metro station is also nearby. You can easily take an auto-rickshaw from these stations to the temple.
- By Bus: Malleshwaram is well-connected by BMTC buses. You can alight at the Malleshwaram 15th Cross or Circle bus stop and take a short walk down 2nd Temple Street.
- By Road: Located in the heart of Bengaluru, it is easily reachable via cabs or personal vehicles. However, street parking for four-wheelers on 2nd Temple Street can be highly challenging due to narrow roads.

Speciality of this Temple

- Continuous Abhishekam: The defining feature is a stone Nandi positioned on an elevated tier directly above the Shiva Linga. A continuous, perennial stream of fresh water flows out from the Nandi’s mouth 24/7, bathing the Shiva Linga below before collecting in a central stepped pool.
- The Hydraulic Mystery: The exact physical source of this uninterrupted water stream remains a mystery. While some historical notes connect it to a subterranean conduit from the nearby Sankey Tank, others point to a natural fresh-water aquifer, as the flow persists regardless of the seasonal water levels of nearby lakes.

- Below Ground Level: Unlike standard temples, this structure is built entirely below the surrounding street level, offering a naturally cool, insulated, and incredibly quiet sanctuary amidst a bustling commercial neighborhood.

History and Legends

- The Rediscovery (1997): For nearly a few centuries, the temple had fallen completely out of public memory, becoming entirely buried underground beneath soil and debris. In 1997, during routine commercial excavations for a plot of land, workers struck a black stone structure. Further digging by the Archaeological Survey of India (ASI) painstakingly unearthed the entire intact temple complex.
- Conflicting Origins: The exact age of the initial shrine remains a point of historical debate. ASI estimates the core stone remnants to be around 400 years old. However, historical documentation in B.N. Sundara Rao's text Bengalurina Itihasa notes that a prominent 19th-century merchant and philanthropist, Rao Bahadur Yele Mallappa Shetty, heavily structured and established this specific Kalyani layout and water conduit system sometime around 1882 to channel underground streams constructively.

Architecture

- Layout: The temple does not feature a traditional towering Gopuram (entrance tower). Visitors descend a flight of stone stairs into an open courtyard.
- The Kalyani (Stepped Tank): The focal centerpiece is a 15-foot-deep stone stepped tank. The clean water collecting here plays host to an active ecosystem of large fish, turtles, and frogs, giving the precinct a highly archaic feel.
- Stone Pillars: The central pool is flanked by a beautifully preserved double-storied colonnaded corridor lined with rough, heavy granite stone pillars typical of classic southern stone masonry.

Main Deity and Subdeities

- Main Deity: Lord Shiva in the form of a black stone Shiva Linga. Uniquely, both the Nandi and the Shiva Linga are Dakshinamukha (facing the southern direction), which is highly unusual since standard Hindu shrines generally face East.
- Subdeities: A separate small shrine dedicated to Lord Ganesha is present within the courtyard. There is also an beautifully carved Navagraha (nine celestial planets) installation, arranged around the central sun deity.

Daily Rituals, Poojas, and Charges

- Timings: The temple is open daily from 7:30 AM to 12:00 PM and from 5:00 PM to 8:30 PM.
- Daily Rituals: The chief priests conduct standard morning and evening Arati and Archana. Because the Shiva Linga undergoes a perpetual, natural water abhishekam from the Nandi, formal water rituals happen automatically around the clock.
- Charges: Entrance to the temple is entirely free. Basic Archana tokens can be purchased directly from the priest counter for a very nominal fee (typically around ₹10 to ₹20), though exact updated price boards for larger personal offerings should be verified directly at the counter.

Special Poojas and Charges

- Special Sankalpa poojas, Rudra Abhishekam, and Pradosha rituals are performed on auspicious days. Devotees wishing to sponsor specific elaborate decorations (Alankara) or personalized rituals need to coordinate directly with the head priest inside the sanctum to book slots and pay the respective prescribed temple trust fees.

Festivals Celebrated

- Maha Shivaratri: This is the grandest festival celebrated here. The underground courtyard is spectacularly decorated with lights and flowers, and thousands of devotees stand in long queues throughout the night to witness the illuminated continuous water flow over the deity.
- Pradosham & Karthika Somavara: The bi-weekly Pradosha days and the Mondays of the holy month of Karthika witness special evening crowds, extended decoration, and extra devotional chants.

Facilities Available for Devotees

- Accommodation: As this is a compact local city shrine, no accommodation or lodging facilities are available within the temple premises.
- Amenities: Basic clean space to sit along the stone steps for meditation or quiet contemplation. Wheelchair accessibility is somewhat limited at the inner core due to the descending stone steps, but manageable up to the viewing edge.

Do's and Don'ts

- Do's: Dress in decent, conservative traditional attire fitting a place of worship. Remove footwear and leave it at the designated stand outside before descending the stairs. You can sit quietly on the stone corridors to meditate or watch the turtles.
- Don'ts: Do not feed the fish or turtles in the Kalyani with external food or snacks, as it disrupts the regulated water cleanliness. Photography regulations can be strict near the main inner sanctum; look for signs or ask the priests before clicking pictures.

Nearby Temples

The immediate vicinity is a rich cultural node holding multiple historic shrines within a 2-minute walking radius:

- Kadu Malleshwara Swamy Temple: The famous 17th-century hillock temple dedicated to Shiva, which gave the suburb of Malleshwaram its name.
- Sri Gangamma Devi Temple: Located right opposite, dedicated to the regional guardian goddess.
- Sri Lakshmi Narasimha Swamy Temple: Another historic shrine located just a short walk down the lane.

Nearby Hotels & Eateries

Malleshwaram is famous for its iconic traditional South Indian culinary spots. Within a 500-meter radius, you can visit:

- Asha Food Camp and Surya Refreshments for excellent local vegetarian tiffin items, dosas, and filter coffee.
- Sri Sairam Chats & Juice Centre for legendary local street food chats.

Nearby Tourist Spots

- Sankey Tank (approx. 500 meters): A beautiful, serene lake with a well-maintained walking track, perfect for an evening stroll.
- Bangalore Palace (approx. 2.2 km): The historic royal palace showcasing grand Tudor-style architecture.
- ISKCON Sri Radha Krishna Temple, Rajajinagar (approx. 2.4 km): A monumental contemporary temple complex.

Donation Info & Contact

- Contact Number: General inquiries are typically handled via local trust management at 080 2235 2828 or local listings at +91-9886888983.
- Donations: Official donation boxes (Hundis) are securely placed inside the courtyard for cash contributions toward temple maintenance. For formal receipts regarding large developmental donations, one can directly approach the administrative desk or the senior priest on duty during morning hours.

Sri Dakshinamukha Nandi Tirtha Kalyani Kshetra

Location: Sri Dakshinamukha Nandi Tirtha Kalyani Kshetra (also known as Nandi Tirtha, Nandishwara Teertha, Basava Teertha, or Malleshwaram Nandi Gudi) is located on 2nd Temple Street, Vyalikaval/Kodandarampura, Malleshwaram, Bengaluru, Karnataka 560003 (or nearby 17th Cross references). It sits in front of the Gangamma Temple and diagonally opposite the Kadu Malleshwara Temple in the north-western part of Bangalore.

How to get there:

- By Metro: Nearest station is Sampige Road (Green Line), about a 10-minute walk.

- By Bus: Accessible from Majestic, Yeshwanthpur, or Malleshwaram areas; BMTC buses stop nearby (e.g., Malleshwara 15th Cross).

- By Auto/Taxi: Easily reachable from central Bangalore; short ride from Yeshwanthpur or Majestic.

- Parking: Limited on-site; public transport or walking from nearby areas is recommended. Coordinates approx. 13.0044°N 77.5722°E.

Speciality of this temple: This is a unique underground Shiva temple rediscovered in 1997 after being buried for centuries. Its standout feature is the Dakshinamukha (south-facing) Nandi statue positioned above the Shiva Linga. A continuous stream of holy water (Tirtha) flows from Nandi's mouth onto the Linga below and into a central stepped tank (Kalyani). This perpetual flow (linked historically to Sankey Tank overflow or possibly a spring) symbolizes eternal devotion and purification. Both Nandi and Linga face south (uncommon, as Nandi usually faces east), associating it with conquering death and ancestral rites. It offers a serene, mystical atmosphere in a busy area.

History and legends: The temple's exact origins are unclear; some sources suggest Chalukyan/Nolamba-Pallava era (possibly 400+ to over 1,000 years old), while others note 19th-century construction/renovation by Rao Bahadur Yele Mallappa Shetty post-Sankey Tank (1882). It fell into disuse, got buried under mud (below ground level, no prominent gopuram), and was rediscovered in 1997 during excavation for a housing project. Local protests and digging revealed the intact structure. Legends tie it to ancient worship; water engineering demonstrates sophisticated traditional hydrology. It links to the nearby Kadu Malleshwara complex.

Architecture: The temple is built below ground level, accessed via stone steps. It features a pillared covered corridor surrounding a central stepped Kalyani (temple tank). Nandi sits on a platform directly above the Shiva Linga; water flows through an opening onto the Linga and into the tank, with overflow to an external well. Includes shrines for Ganesha and Navagraha. Strong granite pillars and preserved stone structure highlight ancient engineering.

Main deity and subdeities:

- Main Deity: Shiva as Shivalinga (Nandikeshwara), with water constantly abhisheka from Nandi.

- Subdeities: South-facing Nandi (prominent), Ganesha shrine (left corridor), Navagraha platform (right side). Some references to other deities like Parvati, Kartikeya in carvings.

Daily rituals and poojas and their charges:

- Temple timings (approx.): 7:30 AM–12:00 PM and 5:00 PM–8:30 PM (may vary; Mondays/Special days extended).

- Daily Abhisheka (using flowing water), offerings of bilva leaves, milk, honey, sandalwood. Morning Abhisheka (~7:30–8:30 AM), Maha Aarti (~12 PM), Evening Aarti (~6:30–7:30 PM).

- Specific charges are not widely listed online and are often donation-based or nominal; enquire at the temple counter for archana, abhisheka, etc.

Special poojas and their charges: Special observances on Mondays (Somwar), Pradosham, and during festivals. Dakshinamurthy Pooja and others mentioned. Charges likely nominal/donation-based; contact the temple for current rates. Maha Shivaratri draws large crowds.

Festivals celebrated: Traditional Shiva festivals, especially Maha Shivaratri (huge crowds), Pradosham, Mondays, and Karthika Masam (lamp lighting, special rituals). All standard Shiva-associated events.

Facilities available for devotees such as accommodation: Primarily a small, visit-and-pray temple with no on-site accommodation mentioned. Devotees rely on nearby hotels/lodges in Malleshwaram. Basic facilities like the Kalyani for spiritual purposes; donations accepted at counter. Maintain silence and sanctity.

*Do's and don'ts:

- Do: Remove footwear, maintain silence, offer bilva/milk etc., meditate/pray respectfully.

- Don't: Photography often discouraged in sanctum; no loud behavior; respect the underground/sacred space. Carry a cloth to sit if needed.

Nearby temples: Gangamma Temple (opposite), Kadu Malleshwara Temple (diagonally opposite, one of Bangalore's oldest).

Nearby hotels: Plenty in Malleshwaram (budget to mid-range); search for options near 8th Cross Market or Sampige Road. Many choices within walking distance.

Nearby tourist spots: Sankey Tank (lake for relaxation), Malleshwaram 8th Cross Market (shopping, street food), other local temples. Central Bangalore attractions are a short ride away.

Donation info with contact phone number: Donations can be made at the temple counter for maintenance, rituals, etc. Contact: +91 98868 88983 (temple-related); email dakshinamukha.nandi@gmail.com (one source). Verify on-site or via local listings for official updates.

*Any other info: The eternal water flow remains a point of wonder (no confirmed mechanical source). It is a peaceful, lesser-crowded spot ideal for quiet darshan and reflection. Declared a heritage site post-rediscovery. Visit early morning for a serene experience with sunlight on the Kalyani. Always confirm current timings/rituals as they can change.

This information is compiled from reliable sources like Wikipedia and local blogs. For the latest details (e.g., exact pooja rates), contact the temple directly.

Sri Dakshinamukha Nandi Tirtha Kalyani Kshetra — Malleswaram, Bangalore

Location

The temple is located at 2nd Temple Street, Vyalikaval, Kodandarampura, Malleshwaram, Bengaluru, Karnataka 560003 (Wanderboat AI) . It sits directly in front of the Gangamma temple and diagonally opposite the Kadu Malleshwara (Kadu Malleshwara Swamy) temple (Wikipedia) , in the heart of old Malleshwaram.

🚗 How to Get There

- By Metro: Nearest station is Sampige Road (Green Line) — about a 10-minute walk (Dharmikvibes) . Mantri Square station is also roughly 1.5 km away.
- By road: Easily reachable by auto-rickshaw; walking distance from many points in Malleshwaram (Bengaluru Prayana) .
- Parking: Very limited near the temple — public transport, auto, or walking from nearby areas is recommended.

⭐ Speciality of the Temple

- The focal point is a unique stone Nandi positioned facing south (Dakshina) instead of the usual east — hence "Dakshinamukha Nandi" or "South-facing Nandi" (Wikipedia) .
- Unlike most Shiva temples where Nandi faces the Linga, here Nandi sits on a platform above the Shiva Linga (Temple in Karnataka) , and a continuous stream of water flows from Nandi's mouth onto the Linga below, regarded as holy "Tirtha" (Wikipedia) .
- The water then flows into a central stepped tank (Kalyani), 15 feet deep, home to fish and turtles (VedicFeed) .
- The source of this perennial water remains unexplained — some believe it's a natural underground spring, others link it to the nearby Sankey Tank, though that tank was built only in 1882, after this temple's likely origin (VedicFeed) .
- The entire temple lies below current ground level, with no gopuram, giving it an underground, cave-like serenity.

History and Legends

Accounts genuinely differ here, so it's worth knowing both versions:

- Rediscovery story: The temple fell into disuse, got buried under mud over time since it had no gopuram and sat below ground level (Wikipedia) . In 1997, as Malleshwaram's property prices rose, an attempt was made to sell the site as vacant land; local protests led to excavation, which gradually uncovered the buried temple complex (Wikipedia) . Laborers clearing the land for commercial use struck the Nandi statue, prompting the Archaeological Survey of India to take over excavation, revealing the Shiva Linga and Kalyani beneath (Astro Ulagam) .

- Disputed age/origin: Historian B N Sundara Rao's book Bengalurina Itihasa documents that the late Rao Bahadur Yele Mallappa Shetty actually constructed the Kalyani, Nandi, and Shiva Linga around 1882 (Wikipedia) , after noticing a downward stream from Sankey Tank flowing toward the site, for which he built a conduit pipe leading to Nandi's mouth (Wikipedia) .
- Alternative version: Some accounts state the Archaeological Survey of India dated it to the 17th century, attributing construction to the Maratha king Venkoji (Shivaji's stepbrother), built in plain Maratha style without ornamentation (Tripadvisor) .
- A popular (though historically unverified) claim circulating online suggests the temple could be far older — some say 7,000 years — though there's no historical evidence for this (VedicFeed) .

Given these conflicting accounts, treat the "400-year-old vs. 1882 vs. 17th century" dating as an open historical question rather than settled fact.

Architecture

- Built as a pillared corridor surrounding a central stepped Kalyani (tank) (Temple in Karnataka) , using rough-cut stone pillars with no elaborate ornamentation (VedicFeed) .
- A double-storied colonnaded structure forms part of the complex, along with a separate shrine to Ganesha (Temple in Karnataka) .
- No gopuram/tower — the sanctum is reached by descending steps, sitting below street level.
- A later addition is the western entrance arch topped with a large Nandi idol (Tripadvisor) ; the original structure itself was left unchanged.

🕉️ Main Deity and Sub-deities

- Main deity: Lord Shiva, worshipped in the form of a Shiva Linga (Nandikeshwara) (Wikipedia) , with the south-facing Nandi above it.
- Sub-deities: Lord Ganesha and the Navagraha (nine planetary deities) also have shrines within the temple premises (VedicFeed) .

Daily Rituals, Poojas & Festival Timings

- Regular temple hours: 7:30 AM–12:00 Noon and 5:00 PM–8:30 PM daily (Wikipedia) (a few sources list the evening slot starting 5:30 PM — confirm by phone before visiting).
- Daily abhisheka (ritual bathing of the Linga) happens through the natural flowing water, multiple times daily (Dharmikvibes) .
- As a Shiva temple, standard rituals apply — but specific seva names, timings, and charges are not published online. For accurate, current pooja charges, it's best to call the temple directly.

💰 Special Poojas, Festivals & Charges

- Special poojas are held during Maha Shivaratri and through the month of Karthika (Kartik masa) (Tripadvisor) , with heavier crowds.
- As a Shiva temple, all traditional Shaiva festivals are celebrated; Maha Shivaratri sees especially large crowds for darshan (Wikipedia) .

I could not find published rate cards for special sevas/poojas online — these are best confirmed directly with the temple office.

🏠 Facilities for Devotees

- Entry is free (TripHobo) .
- A garden with shady trees surrounds the temple, offering a quiet space to sit (Tripadvisor) .
- No dedicated devotee accommodation/guesthouse is documented for this temple — being a small neighborhood shrine rather than a major pilgrimage center, it doesn't run lodging facilities. Plenty of hotels exist nearby in Malleshwaram (see below).

Do's and Don'ts

- Footwear is not allowed beyond the entrance (Dharmikvibes) .
- Maintain silence and sanctity inside; photography is discouraged inside the sanctum (Dharmikvibes) .
- Dress appropriately, as this is a place of active worship (Bengaluru Prayana) .
- Carrying a cloth/mat to sit on for meditation is a nice practical tip from visitors (Dharmikvibes) .
- Steps down to the sanctum can be slippery near the water — watch your footing.

🏨 Nearby Hotels

Malleshwaram is well-served with stays of all budgets — from business hotels along Sampige Road/MG Road area to budget lodges near the railway station. (I'd recommend a quick live search on Google Maps or a booking site for current rates and availability, since hotel options/prices change often.)

🗺️ Nearby Tourist Spots

- Sankey Tank (Wanderboat AI) — scenic lake, walking track
- Kadu Malleshwara Temple complex
- Malleshwaram Market (8th Cross/Margosa Road) — flowers, traditional shopping, local food

- Lalbagh Botanical Garden (a short drive away)

💵 Donation Info & Contact

- Temple contact number: 080 2235 2828 (Temple in Karnataka)
- Facebook page contact (devotee-run page, not necessarily official): +91 98868 88983, email dakshinamukha.nandi@gmail.com (Facebook)
- Donations can be made at the temple counter directly (Dharmikvibes) .
- I'd treat the Facebook contact as secondary — calling the listed landline first is more reliable for verifying current donation procedures, receipts, or 80G tax-exemption status if that matters to you.

Other Useful Info

- Devotees traditionally consider the Tirtha (holy water) beneficial, and some use it as a folk remedy for ailments (TripHobo) — this is a faith-based belief, not a medical claim.
- The Kalyani is home to turtles, fish, and frogs (Wanderlog) , adding to its tranquil, almost untouched feel.
- Best time to visit: early morning, when it's quieter and the cool underground setting feels most atmospheric.
- Note: several "facts" about this temple (its exact age, builder, and architectural era) conflict across sources — if you need historically verified details (e.g., for writing or publishing), it's worth cross-checking with ASI Karnataka circle records or Department of Archaeology, Museums and Heritage, Karnataka.

Sri Dakshinamukha Nandi Tirtha Kalyani Kshetra

Sri Dakshinamukha Nandi Tirtha Kalyani Kshetra is a small, historic Shiva temple in Malleshwaram (Vyalikaval), Bengaluru, noted for its south-facing Nandi that pours a continuous spring into a kalyani (temple tank); it was rediscovered after being buried for centuries and is open to visitors daily during morning and evening hours

Location and contact

Address: 2nd Temple Street (2H3C+QV3), Vyalikaval / Kodandarampura, Malleshwaram, Bengaluru, Karnataka 560003.

Coordinates: approx. 13.005045°N, 77.573158°E.

Phone / contact shown in local listings: +91 80 2235 2828.

How to get there

Metro + walk: nearest metro/green-line station often given as Sampige Road (Kazhinjipete) — about a 8–12 minute walk to 2nd Temple Street in Malleshwaram.

Bus: frequent BMTC buses to Malleshwaram / Malleshwaram 2nd Cross; from Majestic or Yeshwantpur take buses toward Malleshwaram and walk a short distance.

Auto / taxi: readily available across Bangalore; give driver “2nd Temple Street, opposite Gangamma Temple / near Kadu Malleshwara” for an easy drop.

Speciality of the temple

The unique feature is the Dakshinamukha (south-facing) Nandi statue from whose mouth water flows continuously forming a sacred tank (kalyani/teertha); this natural/perennial spring and the south-facing Nandi are the temple’s chief attractions.

It’s a compact, serene shrine tucked into the dense temple precincts of old Malleshwaram, offering a “hidden gem” experience amid the bustle.

History and legends

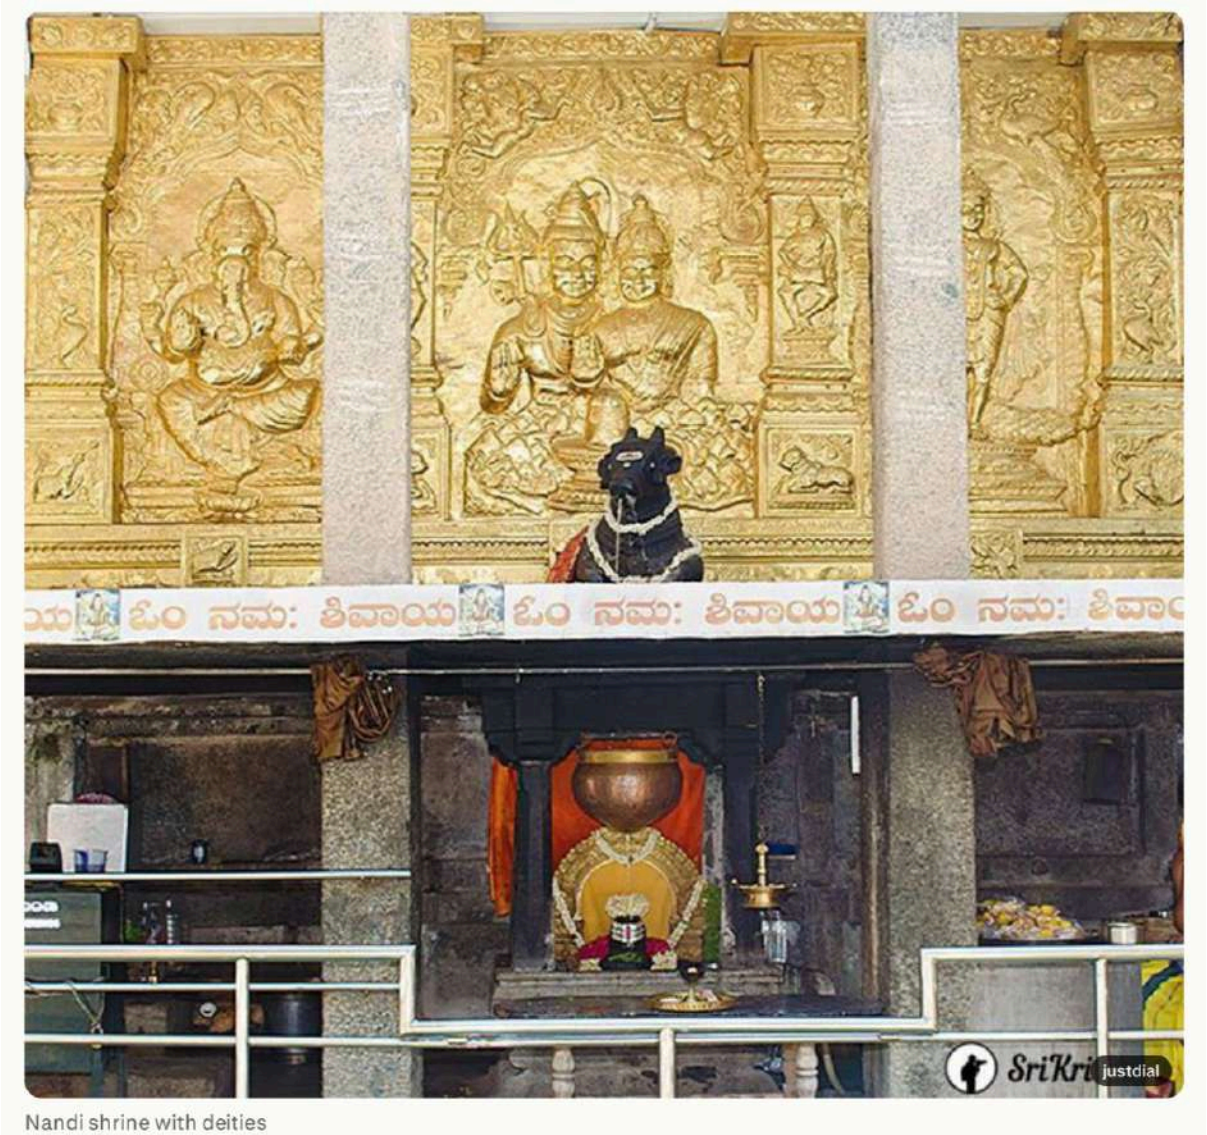
Age and rediscovery: the shrine is reported as over 400 years old and was reportedly buried/hidden under soil for centuries; it was rediscovered during construction/excavation around 1997 and subsequently cleared and restored.

Local tradition links it to the older temple cluster in Malleshwaram (Kadu Malleshwara, Gangamma), and the Nandi’s spring is often regarded as sacred teertha with associated local legends (common in regional retellings and vlogs).

Architecture

Small-scale, local-styled temple typical of old Bangalore neighbourhood shrines; stone Nandi sculpted facing south near a Shiva linga and a compact kalyani/tank immediately adjacent or below the Nandi.

The visible superstructure and mantapa are modest; details and ornamentation are best appreciated in photos or an on-site visit.



Nandi shrine with deities

Main deity and subdeities

Main deity: Lord Shiva in the form of a Shiva Linga; the prominent Nandi (Dakshinamukha Nandi) is the distinctive icon at the site.

Subdeities / neighbouring shrines: nearby Gangamma and the major Kadu Malleshwara temple form part of the temple-cluster; smaller local shrine images and usual ancillary deities may be present within the precincts.

Daily rituals, poojas and charges

Typical opening hours reported: morning (around 7:30 AM to 12:00 Noon) and evening (around 5:00 PM to 8:30 PM) — check locally for current timings.

Public sources list routine abhisheka and aarti timings (examples: morning abhisheka ~7:30–8:30 AM, noon maha aarti ~12:00 PM, evening aarti ~6:30–7:30 PM) but charge details are not standardized publicly and vary; small donation boxes are usual.

For exact pooja names and rates (abhisheka, alankara, special abhishekam), contact the temple directly via the number in local listings.

Special poojas and charges

No authoritative public list of special pooja packages and fees was found in listings; local practice at small neighbourhood temples is to accept donations or set modest fees for special abhishekam, homa or seva.

If you need specific fees (e.g., Rudrabhishekam, special homa, or group bookings), call the local contact to request current rates and advance booking.

Festivals celebrated

Major Shiva-related festivals such as Maha Shivaratri and local temple anniversaries are observed; festivals draw larger crowds given the temple's Shiva connection and its place in the Malleshwaram temple cluster.

Local celebrations often coordinate with neighbouring Kadu Malleshwara and Gangamma temple events; check with temple for exact festival dates and special arrangements.

Facilities for devotees

Accommodation: no formal dharmashala or lodging reported at this small shrine; for stay, use nearby hotels in Malleshwaram or central Bangalore.

Food / prasad: basic prasad distribution during aarti/festival is typical; no large canteen reported.

Accessibility and parking: limited parking in the narrow lanes of old Malleshwaram; best to use public transport or park a short walk away.

Clean water and toilets: small temples usually provide basic facilities; confirm on-site for accessibility needs.

Do's and don'ts

Do: dress modestly, remove footwear before entering, observe local customs during darshan, and ask before photographing inside sanctum.

Don't: bring non-vegetarian food into the sanctum, shout or disturb worshippers, or litter the temple precincts.

Nearby temples and tourist spots

Kadu Malleshwara Temple — a major, historic Shiva temple close by (diagonally opposite).

Gangamma Temple — directly in front of the Nandi Tirtha shrine.

Other Malleshwaram attractions: Sankey Tank (park & lake), Bhavani Shankara Temple, Malleshwaram Market and the old residential streets with heritage homes.

Nearby hotels

Malleshwaram has several guesthouses, mid-range and budget hotels; for more choices consider nearby areas (MG Road, Shivajinagar, Yeshwantpur) and online booking platforms for current availability. No specific temple-run accommodation is listed.

Donation info and contacts

Temple contact listed in local directories: +91 80 2235 2828; small neighbourhood temples accept cash donations and sometimes online/UPI donations via local trust accounts — confirm the correct account/receipt practice when you visit or call.

For larger donations or formal sponsorship (prasad, flower supply, festival sponsorship), contact the temple trustees via the local phone number.

Any other useful info

Rediscovery and archaeology: multiple local articles and videos describe the temple as an old structure that was unearthed and restored, making it of interest to those studying Bangalore's temple history and hidden shrines.

Visiting tips: visit early morning to see the spring and morning abhisheka with fewer crowds; carry light offerings (flowers, fresh fruit), wear comfortable footwear for walking narrow lanes, and combine the visit with Kadu Malleshwara Temple which is very close.
